"These are well deserved promotions and represent expanded responsibilities commensurate with their contribution to ICE's solid performance and growth," said ICE Chairman and CEO Jeffrey C. Sprecher.

"I'm pleased to elevate Tom Farley to lead ICE's global financial markets businesses. We continue to invest in these markets and I am confident that with Tom's leadership we will continue to drive growth and strong returns on our investments."

Sprecher said, "Ben will lead ICE Futures U.S. at a time of regulatory change, growth and innovation. He has already made significant contributions to these efforts. Bruce is leading our global swap data repository business, which leverages his deep expertise in developing effective solutions for post-trade operations."

In his new role, Farley will oversee the development of initiatives within ICE's OTC financial markets, including FX, credit, equity derivatives, and fixed income. Farley will report directly to Sprecher as a member of ICE's executive management team. Farley has served as President of ICE Futures U.S. since February 2007. He was previously President of SunGard's Kiodex business unit, where he also held the positions of COO and CFO.

Jackson joined ICE in July of 2011 as the Chief Operating Officer of ICE Futures U.S., ICE's New York based futures exchange. He will continue to serve as COO in addition to his new role as President. Prior to ICE, Jackson led SunGard's energy and commodities business as Senior Executive Vice President.

Tupper will lead the introduction of ICE Trade Vault as it delivers its patented solution, consistent with global financial reform. He joined ICE in 2000 as a Market Manager and was most recently Vice President of ICE eConfirm, where he led the development and growth of ICE's electronic trade confirmations business. Prior to ICE, he held various trading, brokering and marketing roles in the energy trading sector. The ICE eConfirm business will continue to report to Tupper in his new role.
