ResMed's First Top-of-Head CPAP Mask, AirFit N30i, Now Available across U.S.

1/21/2019

- AirFit N30i adds a top-of-head mask-to-tube connection to ResMed's expanding CPAP mask portfolio, helps the wearer move and sleep in any position
- New "cradle" cushion sits under the nose, designed to reduce facial markings and irritation

SAN DIEGO--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- ResMed (NYSE: RMD, ASX: RMD), today introduced AirFit N30i, its first top-of-head-connected nasal CPAP mask, across the United States, with a newly designed nasal cradle cushion that sits just under the wearer's nose.

The top-of-head connection keeps tubing out of the wearer's way, letting them move and sleep in any position. The nasal cradle cushion – ResMed's first – is designed to reduce facial markings and irritation.

AirFit N30i is also convenient for equipment providers and sleep labs – it fits 96 percent of PAP users with just two frame sizes and four cushion sizes.

How AirFit N30i compares to the market-leading nasal top-of-head mask

In side-by-side comparisons, three out of four users preferred AirFit N30i over the other nasal mask with a top-of-head connection. A majority stated they loved AirFit N30i and would take it home as their mask of choice, with many claiming it was “very comfortable,” it’s “easy to use,” or that it “caused little disruption to their bed partner.”

“AirFit N30i is a great choice for nasal mask wearers who move when they sleep,” said Jim Hollingshead, president of ResMed’s Sleep business. “It’s all about freedom – users are free to sleep however they want and enjoy a comfortable, reliable seal. And AirFit N30i is so easy to fit, sleep professionals are going to be freed up to serve more people.”

AirFit N30i is also available in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and most of Europe, with other countries planned to follow later this year.
