“New Orleans has made remarkable strides over the past decade to reclaim its position as a world-class destination,” said Chris Robertson, owner and developer of Waypoint NOLA, LLC. “Inspired by the city's flourishing economies, I am pleased to introduce the Hyatt House brand to further diversify New Orleans' room product.”

An adaptive reuse of an existing 24-story office building, the 194-room hotel occupies seven floors within the building and connects to the adjacent Hyatt

Regency New Orleans through a second-floor sky bridge. The hotel's location at Poydras Street and Loyola Avenue provides ideal accessibility to the Central Business District, Arts, Sports & Entertainment Districts, and new BioDistrict, as well as popular attractions such as the Mercedes-Benz Superdome, Smoothie King Center, French Quarter, Loyola Streetcar Line, Mississippi Riverfront, and Ernest N. Morial Convention Center.

“As a New Orleans native, I am delighted to see the city’s new BioDistrict and robust hospitality industry bring exciting new developments to local neighborhoods and communities,” said Jane Tebbe Shute, general manager, Hyatt House New Orleans/Downtown. “Our guests can appreciate the hotel’s contemporary design and the apartment-style suites with full kitchens. With spaces that fit the needs of our guests and the hotel’s prime location, we are poised for success and are excited to contribute to the ongoing economic success of New Orleans.”
