ICE OPENS LONDON TELECOMMUNICATIONS HUB

Released : 20 March 2006

ATLANTA, March 20/PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- IntercontinentalExchange (NYSE: ICE), the leadingelectronic energy marketplace, announced that it opened its new Londontelecommunications hub today. The hub is designed to improve access and reduceconnectivity costs to ICE's electronic trading platform for current andprospective ICE market participants in the region.

The London location is the third telecommunications hub that ICEhas opened thus far. In addition to a Chicago hub opened in January and aEuropean hub outside of London opened last year for Western European customers,ICE plans to open hubs in Singapore in May and in New York in June. Marketparticipants can use these hubs to access ICE's energy futures andover-the-counter (OTC) markets, and ICE can customize the bandwidth size fortheir connections, as well as the type of circuits they require to meet theirspecific data needs.
