June 12, 2013

NEW YORK, June 12, 2013 – Silicon Valley, Calif.-based Gigamon, a leading provider of intelligent Visibility Fabric™ architecture for enterprises, data centers and service providers around the globe, opened for trading today on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) under the ticker symbol “GIMO” after its initial public offering. Barclays is the Designated Market Maker (DMM) for the company’s stock.

Chief Executive Officer Paul Hooper , joined by members of the company’s management team, celebrated the company’s first day of trading by visiting the NYSE trading floor for the stock opening and by ringing The Opening Bell®.

“We are delighted to welcome Gigamon to the NYSE’s growing community of innovative technology companies,” said Scott Cutler, Executive Vice President, Head of Global Listings, NYSE Euronext. “Gigamon has distinguished itself as a leader in providing intelligent network traffic visibility products and solutions on a global scale. We congratulate Gigamon on its IPO and look forward to a long-standing partnership with the company and its shareholders.”

“This marks another major milestone in the continued evolution and growth of the Gigamon organization,” said Paul Hooper, CEO of Gigamon. “As virtualization, cloud computing, mobility, big data and the emergence of software defined networking reshape the way our customers’ businesses operate, our mission at Gigamon remains the same. We are focused on extending the scale, capability and value of our intelligent Visibility Fabric™ to enable the management of their increasingly complex networks. We look ahead to the next exciting evolution in our Traffic Visibility portfolio and delivering pervasive and dynamic intelligent visibility for our customers.”
