

The Washington Post Names Comstock Companies a 2020 Top Washington-Area Workplace

6/25/2020

RESTON, Va., June 25, 2020 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Comstock Companies has been named one of The Washington Post's 2020 Top Workplaces in the Washington area. Selection is based on employee feedback gathered through an anonymous third-party survey administered by research partner Energage, LLC, which measured several aspects of workplace culture, including alignment, execution, and connection.

"Now in its seventh year, The Post's Top Workplaces list continues to highlight the companies that are leaders in the Washington-area in terms of employee engagement and satisfaction," said Washington Post Top Workplaces editor Dion Haynes. "We had a record number of employees participate in the survey this year, making it clear that these organizations have made cultivating an atmosphere of support and respect a priority."

"We are honored to be recognized as a top workplace in the Washington, DC region" said Christopher Clemente, Founder and CEO of Comstock Companies. "This honor belongs to every member of the Comstock team, all of whom have played a role in building a customer focused culture that values teamwork, integrity and excellence in every aspect of what we do. Comstock's dedicated team of real estate professionals embrace these and other core values while striving to exceed the expectations of those with whom we do business, and of the communities where we conduct business. I am proud of Comstock's accomplishments, but most of all, I am proud of Comstock's team!"

The full list along with additional content will run in print in a special Top Workplaces magazine on October 14 and will be available on The Post's site. The Washington Post will also host an awards ceremony in October to recognize the 200 top-ranked companies.
