

Andrew W. (Drew) Evans

Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer | Southern Company

Andrew W. (Drew) Evans was named executive vice president and chief financial officer of Southern Company, one of America's largest public utilities, in June 2018. In this role, Evans is responsible for the company's accounting, finance, business development, investor relations, treasury and information technology. He also serves as the chief risk officer and is a member of the Southern Company Management Council.

Prior to joining Southern Company Services, Evans served as president and chief executive officer of Southern Company Gas, the largest distributor of natural gas in America. He also served as chairman of the Southern Company Gas Board of Directors.

Evans joined Southern Company Gas, formerly AGL Resources, in May 2002, and held several positions of leadership, including chief operating officer, chief financial officer and treasurer.

Evans came to Southern Company Gas from Mirant Corporation, formerly Southern Energy Inc., where he served in various finance and business development roles over a nine-year period. Prior to Mirant, Evans was employed by National Economic Research Associates and the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

He uses his time in service to the community. Evans serves as chairman of the Grady Health Foundation. Additionally, he is a member of the Emory Board of Trustees and the boards of Zoo Atlanta and United Way of Greater Atlanta – HomeFirst Atlanta Community Oversight Board. Evans also serves on the energy advisory council of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. He previously served as audit chairman of Grady Memorial Hospital Corporation and on the boards of Georgia Council on Economic Education and New American Pathways.

Evans is a graduate of Emory University and the Booth/Kellogg program, CEO Perspectives. He lives in Atlanta with his wife, Faye.