

What is my cost-basis?

Tracking cost-basis information is the stockholder's responsibility.

The Company does not provide cost-basis calculations.

Cost basis is the total cost you paid to acquire your stock. When you receive the merger consideration for your stock as part of the Questar/Dominion merger, you need to know your cost basis to determine if you have a taxable capital gain or loss. Your cost basis typically is the original purchase price of the stock – adjusted for any fees or commissions.

The cost basis of your shares is the total amount you invested through:

- Purchase from a stockbroker; and/or
- Direct purchase through Questar by means of reinvesting dividends and/or making optional cash investments.

Your original purchase price for Questar stock is best determined by using the information provided on your brokerage or reinvestment statements. If you have not kept your original records, calculating your cost basis can be more challenging and time consuming. To provide shareholders with possible resources, you may want to consider these two options after consulting with your tax advisor:

Calculation options:

If you do not have your stock-purchase records:

1) Cost-basis Calculator (for a fee).

Go to NetBasis, an online cost-basis calculation system. A calculation will cost you $25. This website link is provided only as a convenience for shareholders. If you choose to use the service to help calculate your Questar stock basis, you'll need to provide your purchase/acquisition/sales dates and the number of shares acquired and/or sold on that date. NetBasis will do the rest, automatically adjusting for dividend reinvestment and any corporate actions.

If you need assistance, you can call NetBasis 24 hours a day at 1-888-802-2747 or use the Live Web Chat service located on the Help button once you have logged into the system.

Note: If you click on the NetBasis link above, you will be redirected to the vendor's own web page. The Company receives no compensation from NetBasis and assumes no liability for the accuracy of the resulting calculations or for the security or accuracy of any information you send to or receive from NetBasis.
